

EKF Championships for Regions

04-05 June 2011, Ankara – TURKEY

OFFICIAL BULLETIN

The seat of Turkey's government in the strategic heart of central Anatolia, Ankara is the city selected by the republic's founder to house the capital of the newly politically defined country. Though thoroughly modern in appearance Ankara's history and that of the surrounding area dates back to the Bronze Age and the Hatti civilization. In the second millennium B.C. the Hittites followed as lords of the land and were succeeded in turn by the Phrygians, Lydians and Persians. In the third century B.C., the Galatians, a Celtic race, made Ankara their capital. It was then known as Ancyra, meaning 'anchor' (which is one of the oldest words in the language of the sea-loving Celts). The Romans and then the Byzantines held this strategic expanse of land until 1073 when the Seljuk Turks, commanded by Alpaslan, conquered it. Just over three centuries later in 1402, the city, then but a small outpost, passed into the hands of the Ottomans led by Beyazit I.

After the first World War, Ankara assumed a prominent position as the center of Ataturk's national resistance and the War of Independence that liberated the Turkish homeland from the domination of foreign powers. On the 13th of October, 1923, Ankara was declared the capital of the new Republic of Turkey.

Dominating the modern part of the city, much of it constructed since Ankara's rise to prominence, is the imposing limestone Anitkabir, the mausoleum of Kemal Ataturk. Completed in 1953, this fusion of ancient and modern architectural concepts testifies to the power and grace of Turkish architecture. A museum at Anitkabir displays some of Ataturk's personal items and documents. His house in Cankaya, next to the Presidential Palace, is open on Sunday afternoons.

The oldest parts of the city surround the ancient hisar or citadel. Within the walls, the 12th century Alaeddin Mosque although much rebuilt by the Ottomans, still boasts fine Seljuk woodwork. Many interesting traditional Turkish houses have been restored in the area, and some have found new life as art galleries or attractive restaurants serving local dishes and wine. The beautiful Ankara castle restaurant offers excellent local and international cuisine and wine. It's well-known that Ankara was the cradle of "vine" (Hatti and Hittite) by 2000 B.C. Many vineyards around Ankara sponsor wine-tasting socials. Close to the gate, Hisar Kapisi, the beautifully restored bedestan (covered bazaar), houses the Museum of Anatolian Civilizations with its priceless collection of Paleolithic, Neolithic, Hatti, Hittite, Phrygian, Urartian and Roman artifacts, and the showpiece Lydian treasure. The museum is open every day except Monday. Out side the citadel the 13th century Arslanhane Mosque and the 14th century Ahi Evlan Mosque are worth visiting.

The legacy of Roman times – the third century A.D. public baths (built by the Roman Emperor Caracalla), the fourth century Julian Column and the second-century Temple of Augustus is located in an area below the citadel, near Ulus Meydani (Nation Square). The sole surviving "Political Testament of Augustus", a statement detailing the achievements of the Emperor Augustus, remains inscribed on the wall of his temple in Ankara. There was a time when every temple dedicated to him throughout the Roman Empire bore this text; this is the only complete copy in existence today. The Galatian king Pylamenes built the temple as a tribute to Augustus in 10 A.D. and in the second century, it was re-constructed by the Romans on the ancient Ankara Acropolis. In the fifth century the Byzantines converted the temple into a church.

Excavations of a Roman theatre, pro-scene (stage), and scene (backstage), can be seen outside the citadel. Roman statues found here are exhibited in the Anatolian Civilizations Museum. The audience area is still under excavation.

Adjacent to the temple stands the 15th-century Had Bayram mosque and mausoleum. This complex is greatly venerated by Muslims as a holy shrine. From Ulus Meydani, with its equestrian statue of Ataturk, continue down Ataturk Boulevard to the Ethnographical Museum which houses magnificent Seljuk doors of carved wood, and other artefacts of daily life. Nearby, the Sculpture and Painting Museum illustrates the history of the Turkish fine arts. The largest mosque in Ankara graces the Kocatepe quarter. The Kocatepe Mosque was built between 1976 and 1987, and is in the Ottoman architectural style.

Ankara has an active artistic and cultural life with world class performances of ballet, modern dance, jazz, theater, opera and folk dancing. The city is especially well known for its Philharmonic Orchestra which attracts a loyal following. Ankara hosts two international festivals in April: "The Arts and Music Festival", and the world-famous "April 23rd International Children's Festival".

Visitors to the city usually like to browse through the old shops in Cikrikcilar Yokusu near Ulus. On the street of coppersmiths, Bakircilar Carsisi, you can find many interesting old and new items, not only of copper but jewelry, carpets, costumes, antiques and embroidery. A walk up the hill to the Citadel Gate takes you past many interesting stalls and vendors selling spices, dried fruits, nuts and all manner of produce. Modern shopping areas are mostly found in Kizilay, on Tunali Hilmi Avenue and in the Atakule Tower in Cankaya. The top of Atakule, at 125 meters, offers a magnificent view over the whole city. Its excellent revolving restaurant allows you to enjoy the complete view in a leisurely fashion. In the new Karum shopping mall, in Kavaklidere, some of Turkey's most chic clothing stores tempt the passer-by.

Dear Ladies and Gentlemen,

Ankara, EKF Regions 2011

These 9th European Karate Championships for the Regions in Ankara are going to be without any doubt a remarkable success. This is assured by the combination of the experience and well doing of the Turkish Karate Federation, and the very successful experiences of the previous editions of these Championships, that have been continuously increasing in size and in quality since its first edition in 2003.

The unique opportunity for all European Regions to compete under their own name, flag and personality in an official sport event makes these Karate Regions Championships a rather singular and attractive activity, bringing to the reality an historic aspiration that has proved to meet so many expectations.

All European karate will travel again to Turkey, scenery of so many top level karate events, and will also have the opportunity to close ties with the Turkish karate.

This 2011 edition counts also with the incentive of the new format started last year, a rather imaginative proposal that includes the youth categories from 14 to 17 years, that so well are performing worldwide and that I am sure are going to give a new perspective to the event.

In the name of the big European Karate family, I want to thank you for your inestimable contribution. Be sure we all will enjoy unforgettable experiences around karate in Ankara.

Antonio Espinós
The President of the European Karate Federation
