

REFERENCES:

- The contest is organized according to the CUP system with a shortened repassage (quarter finalist will go to repassage).
- In groups of small boys, boys and younger cadets there are six classes of performing katas: E class (yellow belt), D class (orange belt), C class (green belt), B class (blue belt), A class (brown belt) and an ABSOLUTE category in katas.
- An absolute category in performing katas for younger age categories implies a competition of all qualitative and promising sportsmen. In this category only sportsmen from classes A and B can perform and at small boys and boys, sportsmen from classes A, B, C and D can perform.
- Competitors from classes E and D (yellow and orange belts) perform preamateur and amateur katas and they can repeat katas in every third round (they have to know at least two katas) and they can not repeat the same kata successively.
- Competitors from class C (green belts) perform amateur and teki katas and they can repeat katas in every fourth round (they have to know at least three katas), and they can not repeat the same kata successively.
- Competitors from class B (blue belts) perform amateur, teki and master katas, in every round a new kata, in fights for medals they can repeat the kata from elimination but not successively.
- Competitors from class A (brown belts) perform master katas, in every round a new kata, in fights for medals they can repeat the kata from elimination, but not successively.
- Competitors on an absolute level in group of younger cadets perform master katas, in every round a new kata, in fights for medals they can repeat the kata from elimination, but not successively.
- Competitors on an absolute level in group of small boys perform preamateur and amateur katas and they can repeat katas in every fourth round (they have to know at least three katas), and they can not repeat the same kata successively.
- Competitors on an absolute level in group of boys perform preamateur, amateur, teki and master katas, in every round a new kata, in fights for medals they can repeat the kata from elimination, but not successively.
- The contest in kata individually is done in the following way: both contestants perform in the kata at the same time (red and blue), after that judges proclaim the winner.
- Competitors in kata team in groups of small boys, boys and younger cadets can perform preamateur, amateur, teki and master katas. Competitors in kata team in group of small boys and boys can repeat katas in every fourth round (they have to know at least three katas), and they can not repeat the same kata successively. Competitors in kata team in group of younger cadets perform a new kata in every round, in fights for medals they can repeat the kata from elimination, but not successively.
